It's what we do

Christmas Pudding

Christmas puddings were invented in Medieval England, during the 1420s.

Christmas Tree

You'll never guess where Christmas trees were first decorated. Latvia... in 1510!

Christmas Bells

Bells have been around forever. More often than not, they're used to signal something, like the start of a Christmas Church Service. And that's why you see them at Christmas!

Snowman

The first ever recorded snowman was found in a book from 1380, just under 700 years ago. But some experts believe humans have been making them for thousands of years!

Decorated House

The tradition of decorating your house goes back way before Christmas. The Romans started decorating their homes in 500BC, and it's still in fashion today.

Candy Cane

Back in the old days, candy canes only used to come in white. No red stripes!

Santa Hat

Did you know Santa didn't always wear red? True story! Mr Claus originally wore green, but changed to red around 1880. We think Santa looks great in both colours.

Christmas Present

Christians believe that baby Jesus was given gifts when he was born, and that's why we give each other presents today. Others say Saint Nicholas made presents popular. Either way, it feels good to give!

Holly

Here's a fun fact for you. If a holly bush has berries, it's a female bush!

The competition opens on 21 November. The closing date is 14 December.
